

Revision History

Revision	Date	Author(s)	Description
1.0	12 November 2017	JIF	Public draft.
1.0.1	15 February 2021	JIF	Minor updates to reference list.
1.0.2	15 February 2021	JIF	Authorship statement added.

Volcanica Policy on Plagiarism

J. I. Farquharson

farquharson@jvolcanica.org

February 15, 2021

AUTHORSHIP STATEMENT

All named authors contributed to drafting of this policy document, with the input and approval of the Volcanica Editorial Committee.

1 PLAGIARISM

Plagiarism is copying the text, data, images, figure captions, or ideas of another person or group, then passing that text or idea off as your own. Any such copied material must be clearly identified, separated from the primary text, and duly credited. By this we mean that the original source of the material must be cited. Plagiarism is tantamount to fraud, and detection of plagiarism will result in rejection of a submitted manuscript. In the event that plagiarism is detected after publication, Volcanica reserve the right to retract the article at fault. The above definition of plagiarism applies:

- irrespective of the of the original source of the copied material or idea
- irrespective of whether the source from which you have copied said material or idea have themselves copied from another source
- irrespective of whether the authorship of the original source is known, unknown, or in question
- irrespective of whether you are the author of the copied material or idea (i.e. self-plagiarism)
- irrespective of whether the author of the original source has given you explicit permission to use their material or idea.

Adapted from the following sources:

Liddell, J., 2003. A comprehensive definition of plagiarism. Community & Junior College Libraries, 11(3), pp.43-52. doi: <https://doi.org/10.1300/J107v11n03.07>

Harvard College Writing Program, What Constitutes Plagiarism? Harvard Guide to Using Sources, Harvard University. [online: <https://usingsources.fas.harvard.edu/home>]